SILVER GATE SWIM CONTEST

THOUSANDS EXPECTED TO WITNESS CHANNEL RACE TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Tomorrow (Sunday, August 8th) is the day set aside for the Channel Race and thousands of fans are expect to flock to the Point Loma and North Island shores to witness the seventh annual Silver Gate swim. The women will start across the 600-yard channel at 3 p. m. The men will begin at 3:30 p. m.

Here is a bit of helpful information for motorists, boaters and pedestrians.

To see the start of race motorists should take either the upper Pt. Loma road to lighthouse, or lower road through Loma Portal and Ft. Rosecrans. Along Pt. Loma heights is perhaps the best place of all. No machines, except those containing swimmers will be allowed on Ballast Point proper. However, spectators may park their cars and walk a half block or so to the water's edge.

Those wishing to see the finish go to North Island, through Rockwell Field to end of road and then walk about three-quarters of a mile. As only officials will be allowed on finish pier and float, spectators will not be able to get a ringside seat view. The hazardous condition of the bridge leading to the pier, makes this ruling necessary.

TREE-PLANTING BEAUTIFIES

The Muir avenue tree planting committee reports satisfactory progress. Both resident and non-resident property owners are being asked to do their share. It is taking some time to communicate with every one.

Honeymoon Trip Across Continent

MR. AND MRS. JOHN HARRISON ENJOY TOUR FROM BROOKLYN TO SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Making a most interesting motor trip in an Oakland car across the North American continent, Mr. and Mrs. John Harrison have arrived in Ocean Beach on a honeymoon tour from their home in Brooklyn, N. Y., and are enjoying the splendid scenic surroundings and ideal southern California climatic conditions in and around San Diego.

On their journey from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific shore, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison visited Niagara Falls, the Dominion of Canada, Port Huron, Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Rapid City and the Black Hills of South Dakota Yellowstone Park, Pocatello (Idaho), Tonapah and Goldfield (Nevada), reaching California at Big Pine and thence down the Pacific coast via Los Angeles to San Diego, and thence across the line on a visit to Tijuana, Old Mexico. They will remain in Southern California for a fortnight or more and will return East by the southern route and thence up the Atlantic coast, thus four-squaring the borders of the United States, with side trips into the neighboring countries northward and southward.

Mr. Harrison is a representative of the California Pie & Baking Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., where the company has an immense plant covering an entire city block, with a daily output of about thirty thousand pies. California fruit products are used to a large extent and Mr. Harrison is combining business with pleasure on his Western trip by keeping an expert eye on the methods and style of the baking industry on the Pacific coast.

On their westward trip from Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison traveled only in the day time, stopping at hotels and auto camps at nights as the occasion arose. They occupied twenty-one days on the trip and their Oakland car consumed just 139 gallons of gasoline, with no mishaps to mar their long and pleasant journey.

FIVE POINTS CIVIC LEAGUE

The Five Points Civic League held its regular weekly meeting last Friday evening at the U-Ban-O Chili parlors on Moore street, President J. J. Carey in the chair.

Although not boasting a large membership this civic organization, probably the youngest on the bay side, is very active, meeting weekly and planning constantly for the development of this business center which is so strategically located at the northern gateway to San Diego.

It was only last winter that this locality was given the official name by the city council on petition of certain property owners, and in March the Civic League was organized, raised $500 and let the contract for the 35-foot electric sign which today spans the convergence of Moore and California streets, which is the geographical center of Five Points, the circumference of which has not been determined as the optimistic residents expect the circumference to enlarge with the completion of the various new paving projects, and because new businesses are coming constantly to this section.

Having secured a name, an electric sign, marking of streets centering in Five Points, widening of the bottle-neck, where Moore and California streets meet at the foot of Pierce street, some official traffic protection and a promise of more traffic protection when funds are available, Five Points is said to be the third busiest traffic center in southern California. The Civic League is now working to obtain cluster lights for this section, and with completion of paving into Five Points and extension of city mail service through this district, it is hoped to make Five Points a transfer center for the street cars to Ocean Beach, Mission Beach and La Jolla. If these ends are achieved they are planning still greater things for the near future.

Five Points recently made its bow to the public of San Diego, proclaiming itself as Five Points, the Gateway to San Diego, from the beach and bay districts, and has attracted the attention of SanDiego and the traveling public.

Mr. J. J. Carey, of Loma Portal, who shares with Mr. H. C. Shreve, the Five Points realty office in the Selby building, is president of the League, and Mrs. G. M. Selby is secretary.

TIDE LAND LEASES FOR FIFTY YEARS

The State Harbor commissioners have lately granted to all Bay Front property owners, 50-year leases of the tide lands adjoining property for the very nominal sum of $5 per year per lot. The leases were granted with the understanding that the tide lands are not to be used for business purposes, but for beautifying the water frontage and for the general enjoyment of the owners. This is the first step in a concerted action to enhance the loveliness of one of our waterfronts. Parkways with grass and flowers along the water's edge should add much to the beauty of the Beach.

"BILLY" ENGLAND SETS GOOD EXAMPLE

Talking about the city beautiful idea we must give due credit to Mr. William F. England of the Mission Beach Garage. Mr. England has not only planted flowers around both sides of his garage building, but has removed the weeds from and planted flowers in the vacant lot adjoining his property and pays an employe to keep the plants watered.

Incidentally, the lot does not belong to Mr. England. What a beautiful garden Mission Beach would appear if we all did our little bit.

Important Ruling On Paving Petitions

SECURING CONSENT OF OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTY OWNERS HELD UNNECESSARY

The City Council this week authorized the paving, on a 25 per cent petition of Pendleton street in Pacific Beach, because so much of the property on that street is owned by out-of-town people, who could not be located by circulators of paving petitions. The council took the view that in cases of this character, where a majority of those owning homes on streets desire to have the thoroughfare in front of their homes improved they should not be held back by the owners of vacant property.

CANDIDATE CONNELL BELIEVES IN COOPERATION AMONG OFFICIALS

Stephen Connell, well known San Diego attorney, who is a candidate at the primary election for the office of district attorney, opened his campaign headquarters a few days ago in Room 267 Spreckels Building in San Diego, and has begun an active campaign which he expects will take him to every part of the county before election day.

An indication of the high standing which Connell has among the residents of San Diego County is the fact that four years ago, Connell ran as a "write-in candidate" following the untimely death of then District Attorney, Harry Utley, just a few weeks before the general election. Utley was a candidate for re-election. Nearly 8,000 San Diego County voters wrote in Connell's name on the ballot, establishing what is believed to be a record in "write-in" campaigns in America.

Mr. Connell is waging his campaign on the contention that San Diego County must have complete, effective and friendly co-operation between the district attorney's office, the sheriff's office, the coroner and the city police, if the authorities are to make any headway against the crime wave. This co-operation, he contends, is lacking at present, due to the attitude of the district attorney's office. He also is waging a campaign for personal cleanliness in office.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Press dispatches telling of John D. Rockefeller celebrating his 87th birthday kindled interesting memories of the oil magnate and philanthropist in the mind of Mrs. Mary Tomanek of Porterville. Mrs. Tomanek proudly displays a one cent piece of the mintage of 1853, given her by Rockefeller on the occasion of her 10th birthday, February 2, 1863. Having been sent by her father to the Rockefeller oil plant to secure some crude oil, recommended by a friend as a remedy for rheumatism from which her father was suffering, little Marie tripped aling in such lively spirits on the cold winter day that Rackefeller, then 24, and just starting in the oil business, inquired the reason of her happiness. Told by the little girl it was her birthday, he opened his purse and finding a penny made in the year of her birth, 1853, he gave it to her, all these years this penny, larger than a quarter dollar, has been kept as a lucky coin by Mrs. Tomanek.

New danger to fruit men of the state was seen in the discovery of a queer animal resembling a cat, but equipped with wings, by ranchers Arthur Kingray of Topenish and Wapato, Washington. Professor Joseph Grinnell of the University of California museum of vertebrate zoology, said that if the report was well-founded, the animal was probably a "flying fox" a large member of the bat family found in Asia noted for its destructive work in fruit orchards. Although rigidly excluded by United States customs officials, Dr. Grinnell says that with the entrance of the one animal fruit growers should take immediate steps for its extermination.

Kern county grape growers were warned not to ship too many Thompson seedless and Muscat grapes this season, when H. W. Mellen said, however, that the raisin markets are better this season than they have been for the past five or six years, and asked that all directors of the farm bureau carry to their respective districts the suggestion that growers do a great deal of drying this year.

Diagram of Circuit Employed in a Center-Tapped Coil on the Radio-Frequency Stage.

By R. S. DORNBROCK,
In the Chicago Evening Post.

It is the purpose of the writer to herein point out the application to a well-known type of reflex circuit of a circuit modification long known but little used.

This is the use of a center-tapped coil in the radio-frequency stage, the lower terminal of which is connected to one of the small midget condensers, the opposite side of this midget condenser being connected to the plate terminal of the tube.

This circuit modification is probably most used in certain superheterodyne circuits, wherein a center-tapped loop is employed in connection with the midget condenser "to obtain regenerative action." Then again we see circuit diagrams showing the same arrangement in a tuned radio-frequency circuit, where it is described as "the Rice method of neutralization."

Cuts Out "Blanket" Stations.

A diagram of this circuit modification is shown in Figure 1. Whatever its action, the point is that it exerts a most beneficial influence upon the reflex circuit.

In the circuit set up by the writer, selectivity was very greatly increased, local stations which covered from 15 to 25 degrees in the regular arrangement were made to cover only 4 or 5 degrees on the dial. This was in a location about ten miles from the nearest station, and on an antenna 100 feet long with 35-foot lead-in.

In another location nearer to the bulk of the stations, and on an antenna 75 feet long with 30-foot lead-in, locals were confined to 2 or 3 degrees on the dials, excepting one which was only a few blocks away. This station operates on 250 meters, and blanketed about everything below it on a straight-line frequency condenser, but slightly below 300 meters even this station could be entirely eliminated. All stations above were received excellently.

Tap Is Only Change.

A diagram of the circuit employed is shown in Figure 2. Nearly every one possessing a set employing the circuit which is shown modified in this diagram will recognize it. It has been very popular and the modification outlined in this diagram will help it perform more efficiently in an area where a great majority of sets will pick up at least a couple of stations at once. This circuit is noted for its great volume and low operating upkeep, but in its original form tunes a little too broadly for efficient service.

No information of a technical nature is given, as those of the listening fraternity who do their own tinkering will understand from the diagram exactly what is to be done. No changes in apparatus need be made excepting to bring a center tap from the antenna tuning coil secondary.

Controls by Midget Condenser.

The midget condenser should be located on the panel, since it provides an excellent volume control.

Incidentally, the writer has observed in very recent issues of various radio magazines that this method of controlling radio-frequency is being quite frequently advocated.

Your Grid Leak and Its Important Duty

The action of the grid leak seems to be little understood by the average fan. Great care may have been taken in wiring up the set and in buying the best of parts. Yet when the receiver is put into operation the results secured are very poor. Very often the whole trouble lies in the grid leak, which may not be of the correct value or may be noisy in operation.

To make the action of the grid leak clear we will compare it to the carburetor on an automobile. The carburetor vaporizes or breaks up the gasoline, then mixes it with a certain proportion of air to form an explosive mixture. The supply of air taken into the carburetor is regulated by a choke valve. The carburetor of a radio receiver is the detector tube and the choke valve is the grid leak.

If the choke valve on the carburetor is closed too much, it does not allow enough air to enter and makes the mixture rich with the result that the motor chokes up or may stop altogether. If the grid leak is of such a value that it allows too high a negative charge to accumulate on the grid the tube chokes or paralyzes and the set will not operate or operates very poorly. This is the same effect as when the choke valve on the carburetor is closed too far and does not allow enough air to enter.

If, on the other hand, the grid leak is of such a value that the negative charge on the grid leaks off too rapidly the receiver loses its sensitivity. You can readily see, therefore, that it is important that the size of the grid leak be correct so that the amount of energy the grid can handle is always just right. Use a good-quality grid leak. Secure three or four different sizes and try them out until you find one that gives the best results. Do not try to save money by buying a cheap grid leak or one made by an unknown manufacturer, for very often a poor grid leak is the unsuspected cause of poor or noisy reception

Shield Transformers

When your tuned radio-frequency receiver oscillates so readily it is hard to tune, try shielding the R. F. transformers by inclosing them in a metal box. Intercoupling probably is the trouble with the set.

Prevents Damage

Ammonia or soda water, quickly applied, will prevent damage from acid dropped while taking a hydrometer reading of the "A" battery.

When the Tubes May Be Cause of Your Trouble

When you notice that your radio set is losing in volume, the distant stations fade and disappear, and the quality sounds like a rock crusher, what do you do?

Very likely you look for poor connections, test the batteries or possibly replace them, change the tubes around, add a "C" battery and juggle grid leaks. And to discover? Probably, that the quality remains as poor as before. What next?

Under such perplexing circumstances did you ever give the tubes a thought? Tubes do not last indefinitely. Gradual deterioration of their filaments ultimately results in poor reception. The filament of a tube may still burn, but the coating put on its surface to aid emission of electrons—those tiny particles which give the tube its "life"—eventually disappears. When the coating vanishes the radio set loses its sensitivity and volume and may become very noisy. It is then time to buy new tubes.

When Buying Your "B" Battery Eliminator

It is important when buying a "B" battery eliminator to determine whether or not the device is capable of supplying enough current to operate the set, for if it does not distortion will result. To test the capacity of a "B" battery eliminator connect it to the receiver with which it is to be used and connect a high-resistance voltmeter across its terminals. If, when a loud signal is tuned in, the pointer of the voltmeter remains almost stationary at a voltage which is sufficient to properly operate the set, the device will prove satisfactory.

Electric Machines Are Notorious Intruders

X-ray machines are notorious generators of vagrant radio waves that make themselves audible in near-by receiving sets as harsh, grumbling noises. The small portable "violet ray" affairs sold for home electro-therapeutic treatment are also bad offenders and their use during evening hours should be as limited as possible.

Worth Knowing

An insulated wire will pick up the broadcast programs just as easily as a bare wire, as the waves penetrate the covering without the least difficulty. If the lead-in is insulated it will act as a part of the aerial.

NECKWEAR IS VALUABLE AID; DASHING TYPES FOR SPORTS

OF ALL the details that add interest and variety to the season's modes, neckwear is the most important, and in the company of neckwear performers, the scarf continues to play the stellar role. It is worn from morning to night on the street and everywhere else, but it is especially important as an accessory to those sports and semi-sports costumes that are just now mounting to the zenith of their popularity and evening dress can't be discussed without including scarfs and shawls.

For street and sports wear, printed silks, plain and figured georgette and chiffon, and light crepes, are the favorite mediums for scarfs. But hand-painted scarfs of chiffon or georgette of ribbon or a cooler affair consisting of high crushed collar of lace or crepe de chine with jabot at the front, cascaded from neck to girdle.

In a little journey through the field of sports clothes it soon becomes evident that color is the most important and the most interesting detail of the new models. In outer garments, coats and capes divide honors, but in dresses for sports or semi-sports wear the two-piece mode holds, practically, a monopoly of attention. For variety's sake designs fall back upon the management of colors and have taken "Make it snappy" for their slogan. They are doing some wonderful and beautiful things with the aid of fabrics that are woven in unaccustomed and are to be reckoned with for both day and evening wear. Pastel grounds with figures in high colors, futuristic designs and new batik treatments in more definite figures, are among the interesting novelties shown. For street and sports wear the scarf is most successful when it shows some relationship in coloring or design to the hat or some other item of the toilette. This is apparent in the scarf of white silk, figured with black, worn with a tailored hat, as shown at the top of the picture and in the combination of white and black in the hat at the right, worn with scarf of white fox fur.

But the scarf is not always in the limelight—the possessor of a pretty neck may dress it with a round collar of fine batiste edged with lace, as shown in figure at the left, or with a collar of organdie finished with lace and worn with cuffs to match. Or she may choose a collar and vestee of venice, milan or novelty laces, or collar and sleeve sets of net and lace.

On the other hand—or on the other neck which is not so pretty—one might choose a collar of ribbon and ostrich feathers in black and white, with ties gayer delicate colors—like pastel tweeds and knitted materials.

Two-piece dresses are developed with plain or plaited skirts, with plaited models predominating and much variety and ingenuity in the disposal of the plaits. They are worn with jumpers, jackets or sweaters and these have long, close-fitting sleeves and "V" shaped or scarf necklines. Natural kasha is used in border effects in handsome skirt and jacket suits of colored knitted materials. A very effective combination appears in a dress of caramel-colored knitted goods, the short skirt having a wide border at the bottom of kasha and a split up the front, faced back with kasha and revealing a panel of the knitted goods underneath. Another fancy for sports wear shows a plaited skirt in white or a light color worn with a contrasting jacket. A white skirt, blue jacket and red vagabond hat prove effective, with a red handkerchief and boutonniere to match the hat.

Color is the main attraction of the simple sports coat shown here. It is made of a soft coating in peach colo with fine crossbar in deep brown. The badger fur collar accomplishes a love-by the double-strap slippers of kid, which may repeat the colors in the coat or tones in the fur collar.

A MAN OF COURAGE

For District Attorney

There never has been a greater need in America than at present for men in public office who are clean in heart and mind. In no office is this more vital than in that of district attorney.

The crime conditions in our nation can only be successfully met by concerted, intelligent action from honest, courageous officials.

The responsibility rests upon the people, for they it is who decide who and what their officials shall be.

NOTE—THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY WILL BE ELECTED AT THE PRIMARY, AUGUST 31st.

Would you not love to have companion volumes to help you discover the treasures in that Wonderful Book?

SWEDENBORG

The first twenty give the spiritual sense of Genesis and Exodus as understood in Heaven; and volumes 26, 27, 28 give likewise the spiritual sense of the Book of Revelation.

Volume 29, Marriage Love, views from the union of the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom the Law of Sex throughout all creation. It shows the crown and jewel of the Christian Religion, the union of one with one only. Price $2.00.

Volumes 30, 31, 32, contain a full statement of the True Christian Religion as revealed from Heaven. $3.00 the set.

The whole 32 volumes in half-morocco at $125; in buckram, $40.

The following are the best introductory books to the Revelations of SWEDENBORG. They are in large print, bound in buckram, and contain from 260 to 485 pages.

Who Was Swedenborg?

Emanuel Swedenborg, the son of a bishop, was the great Swedish scientist, philosopher and theologian, whose vast range caused Emerson to term him the mastodon of scholars. Dr. Parkes Cadman recently named him the Universal Genius.

Officially connected, by appointment of the King, with the great mining industry of Sweden, he mastered all the sciences of his time, and wrote the most useful books on metallurgy, minerals, geology, astronomy, and the human brain.

His life search was for the human soul. How his spiritual senses were opened, after he was 50 years of age, that he might reveal the human soul, the life after death, and the Bible itself, may be read in the above named, uplifting, useful books.

BALBOA THEATER

The greatest "Make-up artist" in the world. That's what critics and fans are doing to call Emil Jannings, the motion picture giant of Europe, after they see "Variety," in which he is featured with Lya de Putti, at the Balboa Theatre for five days commencing Sunday.

Paramount is releasing "Variety." It was made in Germany by Director E. A. Dupont for the Ufa Company. It is a great picture, with a great love story.

Bubbling and sparkling gaiety characterizes the elements combined in Fanchon and Marco's latest summer craze creation, "The Beach Club Idea," appearing on the same bill with "Variety."

Ted Donner, star of "Lady Be Good," is the featured artist. Mr. Doner is considered the finest dancer on the American stage, besides being one of the most attractive musical comedy stars. Beautiful Bobbie Thompson is his dancing pardner, and she is a sensation herself as a dancer. The Sunkist Beauties will furnish entertainment with a feature representation the "Evolution of a Bathing Girl," during the period from 1897 to 1917. This feature is a riot.

An additional attraction is the appearance of "Miss San Diego," and other prize winning beauties selected in the recent contest at Mission Beach. They will appear with the Fanchon and Marco "Beach Club Idea," for five days.

George Stolberg and his Greater Band are a feature of the stage presentation. The New-Reel and other short reels complete the program.

CABRILLO THEATER

Never give a sucker an even break."

That's the meaning of the title attached to W. C. Fields' first starring vehicle for Paramount, "It's the Old Army Game," coming to Cabrillo Theatre Saturday. From start to finish, the film is punctuated with giggles, guffaws, laughs and absolute shouts of joyousness.

All of which merriment might be caused by any number of reasons. First, W. C. Fields, making his debut as on honest-to-goodness movie star in this comedy, is one of the most amusing men the screen has ever known. Second, Eddie Sutherland, the director, is a fellow well versed in distributing laughs. Witness his "Behind the Front." Then there is piquant pert little Louise Brooks, featured along with Mr. Fields. She contributes a performance second only to that given by the star. A fine cast which includes Mickey Bennett, Blanche Ring, Mary Foy, and William Gaxton is mighty capable and could not use very much improvement.

And last but not least, we find that Joseph P. McEvoy wrote the original play which was adapted to the silver sheet by Tom Geraghty and J. Clarkson Miller.

The closing exercises of the Vacation Bible School held in the Baptist Church, were held Friday evening, July 30th. The church was crowded to its capacity. Each department presented a portion of its daily work.

The beginners dramatized the story of "Moses in the Bullrushes."

The Juniors gave the story of "Joseph and his Brethren," and the Intermediate Department gave the story of David and King Saul.

The songs and yells of these different departments were greatly enjoyed by all. At the conclusion of the exercises the handwork done by the children was viewed by the parents and friends. Many regrets were expressed by the children that the school had come to a close.

Mother's Cook Book

It takes more than one fall to keep a determined man down; to have failed once does not make one a failure; to have strayed once, cannot make a lost soul.

SEASONABLE FOODS

DURING the summer the appetite needs a little urging and especially attractive dishes appeal to the taste.

Grilled Chicken and Mushrooms.

Sprinkle pieces of cold cooked chicken with red pepper and salt, brush with melted butter and toss in fine crumbs. Place in a hot oven. Cut the stalks from half a pint of mushrooms, place them with two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, dust with mace and cook gently for five minutes, then add salt and pepper, a tablespoonful of flour and a quarter of a cupful of stock. Cook until well done, then pour over pieces of toast. Arrange the chicken around the toast.

Fish Chowder.

Cut up any kind of well-cleaned fish and parboil until nearly cooked. In a deep chowder kettle place a fourth of a pound of salt pork cut in fine cubes, cook until crisp and brown, add three to six sliced onions, cook five minutes, then add half a dozen sliced potatoes, cover with boiling water and cook until the vegetables are done, add the fish and cook a few minutes toward the last of the cooking. Add a quart of rich milk, some crackers soaked in boiling milk (the large milk crackers are best), serving one for each bowl of chowder.

Potato and Nut Salad.

Take three boiled potatoes, three hard-cooked eggs, one-half cupful of walnut meats and a dozen olives. Cut all fine and mix with French dressing. Just before serving add mayonnaise.

Date Souffle.

Beat the whites of four eggs very stiff, add gradually one-half cupful of sugar, then stir in a pound of dates that have been stoned and rubbed to a paste. Bake in a well-buttered baking dish until firm. Serve with whipped cream.

Custards, baked, steamed or boiled, of various flavors, combined with chocolate, caramel or extracts are always a good summer dessert.

Scallop of Pork and Cabbage.

Place a layer of thinly sliced roast pork in layers with cooked cabbage and a cupful and a half of white sauce, arranged in a baking dish. Bake in a hot oven and bake until thoroughly heated.

The Hotel Stenographer

By Roe Fulkerson

"KELLY, it is wonderful what love does," exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer.

"Yeah," agreed the House Detective, "causes suicide, murder, default and an audition to feed another person for the rest of your life."

"That's right, Kelly," laughed the girl "being in love makes the world mighty fifty-fifty. Right now I have a sweetie I am so crazy about that if he caught measles I would take every other measle from him and wear it as a red badge of courage or a title of nobility.

"I would like to work every day on this typewriter to send him to medical college and then some day have him save a king's life and then, when he was praised by reporters, have him show them my picture and tell them that this beautiful girl was the cause of it all because she slaved to pay his way through college.

"Of course that's just a love-sick girl's dream, Kelly. My man is an apprentice plumber who will not make his union card license to rob with until next fall. But he knows the most wonderful dance steps you ever saw and on the floor we look like two well-oiled working parts of an electric washing machine or something.

"He hasn't money enough to hire taxicabs but he has a tuxedo and I would rather walk to a dance with him than ride with some bloated aristocrat in a limousine. And, Kelly, I am the only girl he ever loved. He told me so last night. Maybe I am not the best typist in the world but I would rather write on a clean white page than to use a sheet that was all messed up with some other woman's finger marks. Of course, I told him I had never loved anyone else either, but so long as he keeps on telling the truth we will be happy I am certain."

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

AT 21—Maj. Gen. Sir Elliott Wood, England's Noted Warrior, Was a Superior Mathematician.

"AT THE age of twenty, which was in 1854, I was commissioned and joined the school of military engineering and about a year later I was sent to Weymouth and posted with the Twenty-sixth company of royal engineers. Here it struck me one day that the arched casements carrying the heavy guns were not strong enough to resist the shock of firing at high elevations, so I discussed the matter with two senior subalterns, but they said that a much better mathematician than I had failed to prove them too weak, so it was not much use for me to try.

"Moreover, I worked the thing out and suggested a change in the arches. Maj. Percy Smith, C. R. E., submitted the matter to the War office and my calculation being accepted as substantially correct, the necessary ribs that I had suggested were added to the fort being then built and to similar forts elsewhere.—Maj. Gen. Sir Elliot Wood."

TODAY: General Wood is famous in the British empire for his military activities in England, Egypt and in the Boer war. During the late war he acted in an advisory capacity at the home office.

AS WOMEN DO

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I HELD your roses to my breast,
But found your roses thorns possessed,
Yet shall I throw your rose away
Because of that? Love answers nay.

I hold them closely to my heart,
And then I felt the stab and smart
Of things that hurt. But shall I throw
Away your love, who love you so?

Well, roses fade, men wander far,
And memories are all there are
To cherish now—and some that burn;
And yet from loving shall I turn?

Nay, I shall love through night and morn
Your roses, though they have a thorn;
And I shall love you still the same,
Although your love burns like a flame.

Nor would I wish to throw away
The memories I have today,
Yes, memories of other years,
Although so many have their tears.

Your love has brought me much of ill,
Old things that hurt, that hurt me still,
Yet I love on, as women do—
'Twas not your love I loved, but you.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

TURN ON THE LIGHT

TURNING on the light in unexpected places, exploring the inner crannies and dark recesses of our brain and going even a little farther than that ought to become a fixed habit.

In the quiet hour after the day's work dismiss business or household burdens, sit down awhile, if only for five minutes, and take a survey of yourself. Take no thought of perplexing trifles that have annoyed you all day.

Bid them depart; for it is written that the morrow will take care of itself.

Why worry about these things when you have this divine promise?

Why court care when you should flee from it and get acquainted with yourself, your driving impulses, your heart-desires, your failings, and see yourself in undimmed light?

When you are old, when your play on the tinseled and painted stage is over you may ask what has become of the great, inspiring thoughts that were going to transform the arid wastes into a blooming garden of Eden.

As you sit and muse you will hear a few bygone songs, see a few flitting pictures, an act or two worth remembering, and scores of others you would gladly rub out.

You will wish then that you had turned on the light and seen a great deal more of yourself; that you had throttled the spirit that led you away from youthful resolves and kept on the high road with the travelers who knew the way and were unashamed to take stock of themselves and shoulder heavy packs in humility.

Youth is a daring rider, yet he needs the light at every leap of his swift charger to the end.

Turn on the light in the silent night and look into your heart.

Do this regularly for a month and see the change that comes over you; feel the new strength that tingles your body, quickens your mind and gives mastery over difficulties which but a short time ago were insurmountable.

Turn on the light that others may see and follow.

The world is in urgent need of fearless torchbearers to blaze the way to a better understanding among the nations, a clearer conception of labor, love, truth and honor, still living in the souls of brave men and women, holding their lights high in the darkness and among the frowning mobs of doubters and disbelievers.

Community Building

Duty of Citizens to Guard Public Health

The average citizen pays for accidents and disease in deaths, injuries, illnesses, bills, discounted investments and depreciated values. Therefore it is his job to prevent accidents and disease, says Dr. J. Howard Beard in Hygeia Magazine.

In the old days of the one-horse shay, the physician was responsible for the health of the entire community. Medical science has advanced tremendously since then. So has industrial science. Although many disease conditions have been brought under control, countless new ones have arisen as the result of the rise of industrialism.

Fast trains and airplanes are as much at the disposal of disease germs as of human beings. While large cities foster clinics and medical schools and hospitals, they also foster unhygienic living conditions, accidents and illness.

The physician can no longer handle the situation alone, in spite of his greatly increased knowledge. He must have the co-operation of every citizen in the community. It is the average citizen who can and should insist on the adoption of public health measures, on the health education of school children and adults, and on the furtherance of preventive medicine.

Appearance of House Attracts the Buyer

People who are most vociferous in their appreciation of the sentimental values of their homes, who let it be known to all and sundry that they would never sell their home because of old associations, are frequently the readiest to sell if they get what they call a "good offer." They are really good salesmen, and their boasted affection for their homes is merely good sales talk. While this attitude may be a trifle calloused, there are few of us who do not keep a weather eye upon real estate values. We are proud and pleased when there is a "boom" in our immediate neighborhood. And rightly so. We are pleased whenever the property value of our home advances, because it has materially increased our potential estate, and proud that our purchase has proved to be a wise investment.

Keep your property well painted and you will have mighty few repair bills. Paint is far cheaper than new wood or metal replacements. Watch the less obvious vulnerable points, such as roofs, eaves and down spouts, porch columns, etc. The trim is usually the first to suffer.

Wisdom in Building Well

Whether the house is being built for a home, or to let, the builder will save much money on repairs and upkeep by having the house constructed of the very best materials by the best of craftsmen. The last several years have seen the erection of innumerable "cheap houses," built poorly of inferior materials. These so-called "cheap houses" have been very expensive to the owners, who have found they cheated them of the pride and satisfaction that should have been theirs in the possession of their own home, to say nothing of the hundreds of dollars worth of value that was sadly lacking.

Authentic and authoritative literature is now being published in book form and in pamphlets, magazines and newspapers, so the man who contemplates any sort of building should carefully study this literature with the idea of acquainting himself with what really constitutes good building.

War on Mosquitoes

The first mosquito bite of the season ought to remind the victim that stagnant water is standing around somewhere close by. Rain barrels, tin cans, unsealed cisterns, marshy pools and similar water receptacles and places make ideal hatcheries for this pesty insect. Besides being a disagreeable nuisance mosquitoes carry malaria, especially in the southern part of Illinois. Mosquitoes never breed in running water nor in bone-dry territory. They rarely travel far from the place of birth. Enforcing rigid prohibition against stagnant water in the neighborhood or adding a coat of oil to it will eliminate the bites.

Few Buy Homes Outright

"More than half the houses in the United States are owned by men who make less than $2,000 a year," says W. D. Carter, retiring president of the New York State League of Savings and Loan associations.

"It is estimated that approximately 90 per cent of those who build or buy a home do not pay for it outright at the start. Habits of thrift, economy and self-denial established and practiced in saving to meet the monthly payments by which the home is paid for are among the greatest assets of owning a home."

Clean City an Asset

It is not easy to magnify the influence of cleanliness as a charm. For a city to be clean is good business, if nothing else. But it is much else. Without it there can be little beauty or comfort, little of the air of prosperity that is so desirable.

THE BIRD HOUSE

In the bird house of the zoo three birds were talking to each other.

One was the Greater Bird of Paradise, the second was the Lesser Bird of Paradise—so named because he is not so beautiful as the greater bird.

The third was the Snowy Heron.

"Wick, waw, wick, wick, wick, waw," were the sounds that the Birds of Paradise were making, but this is what they were saying, and as they did so Mrs. Snowy Heron shook her lovely head from side to side, sadly:

"We come from New Guinea and the neighboring islands throughout the southern seas.

"But we'll fast disappear unless people listen and give heed to our story."

"We're very beautiful with our brownish, reddish, tannish, yellowish feathers, our soft throats with touches of green, our yellow eyes and soft yellow heads," added Mrs. Greater Bird of Paradise.

"We get our long plumes when we reach the age of five years but there will be no Birds of Paradise if people will not listen to our story.

"When we're mating and when we're not thinking about being on our guard they come—the wicked hunters—and shoot us with their arrows so we can go upon people's hats.

"When we're happy, oh so happy, they take away our joy for hats and fashion."

"Ah," said Mrs. Snowy Heron (Mrs. Snowy Egret, she is also called), "in the United States there are so few of us left.

"They've even gone after the members of our family who enjoy the climate of Central America and South America.

"They kill us when our plumage is beautiful, which is just when our babies have come and when they need their mothers to feed them.

"The babies are left to starve when egrets are taken for ladies' hats.

"That is the time when we're not on our guard, as we're singing cradle-nest songs to our babies and thinking only of them!

"Ah," she continued, "it is well that we are safe here in the zoo.

"Here the keeper tells people what it means when they follow fashions which take the lives of birds and their little ones!

"For some of them can't be blamed—they don't know!

"And I've heard—here is a happy secret, birds—that children are finding out about us and that the day is coming, when these children grow up, that fashions won't be cruel!"

This story was heard by Nick and Nancy, and Nancy was glad to have it told so that others could hear it, too, for Nancy has formed a club of many of her friends and they have all promised and agreed that they would never wear the feathers of birds who had to be killed in order to get their feathers.

They are also doing all they can to stop others from wearing these feathers.

It is a fine club and besides the good work they do, and the fine promises they make, they have a fine time at their meetings with games and often with refreshments.

Daddy and Nick are proud of Nancy for having started this club and are as keen about it as can be.

But the birds will be happiest of all.

Kind of Dog He Wanted

Jimmie longed for a dog and was always describing the kind he wanted.

THE YELLOW ROSES

By EDYTHE SQUIER

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

"THE last thing," she whispered, "I'll pick yellow roses and stick them in the sash."

She poured out the dishwater carefully on the grapevine roots. She'd better scrub the porch. But, no. She might not be ready in time.

"There's bread, rhubarb, for Willie's supper—if he wants any."

She put her hand up to her neck. What was it squeezing, hurting so?

She walked into her bedroom and Willie's. There, in front of the mirror she forgot Willie. He had said—What?

"You are beautiful in anything."

Was she? She looked. Yes. In a blue percale apron, even. Waves and waves of short yellow hair; blue eyes that were soft and brilliant at once; white arms, slim, white neck; cheeks pinker than peach blooms—she would be lovely in the white ratine with its straight-lined grace. The girls in high school two years ago had said she sure knew how to dress. He thought so.

"And he knows," she whispered. "He knows what I can do more than any one."

She had a feeling of power when she thought of him. Ah! that first time! Really, that had been after all, the best time. Under the pink clouds of blossoms he had leaned against the fence. Willie had gone to town. In trim khaki, puttees, brown boots, surveyor's instruments across his shoulder he had leaned and let his eyes lazily, coolly, devour her. His strong, slim, muscular hands had, even that first time, caught and held hers for an instant. Willie's hands were thick, reddish, freckled. He frightened her; he made her sure of herself. Things had happened in three weeks!

"You feeding chickens, making pies, scrubbing in a little farmhouse out in the sticks!" He laughed amazedly. "How did you ever get into this?"

And now big towns, admiring people, beautiful things worthy of her, a pretty, clever woman, were to be hers for the taking.

She raised her slim arms to slip the white ratine over her head, put on her dress, powdered her neck, her arms, her too scarlet cheeks, brushed her hair until it streamed from her head like a saint's aureole. She put her brush in Willie's suitcase, where other things of hers were, but not any of Willie's, closed it. Now for the yellow roses. How his black eyes would smolder and fairly burn her when he saw the yellow roses in the rough white of her dress. She shivered. How lifted up, glorious, young, strong, powerful, she felt. Oh, Spring. Life. Oh, Love! Real Love!

She ran out, after one more bright moment before the mirror, to the bush low, dusky, agleam here and there with sunshine yellow. How hot it was! She had thought there was quite a wind this morning. She was glad it was hot. She was prettier when it was hot, more white and very, very pink and glowing. She chose a bud here, one there, carefully, that just showed a pouting yellow petal unfolding. But wasn't it hot! She would feel a breeze in a few moments. She would hear the chug-chug of a small inclosed car with rose curtains drawn. She would be lifted into it, would feel those beloved hands hold her—and her life would be beginning.

She pinned the roses on. Was that the car? She raised her head to listen. How queer everything seemed. No wind, hot, still. The birds were still. Suddenly a jay gave a loud, terrified squawk. Then silence again, hot silence. Her heart seemed to turn over and then cease beating. What was that noise? It was getting dark. What strange noise—what was it? She looked up at the sky. The sky was not still. Swirling, brownish clouds that drooped lower in their endless turning. Torn they were and trailing. Across the garden she saw—did she really, she wondered—one tiny, round, whirling wisp of a funnel-shaped cloud go skipping across, saw another, another, like sportive living things at some game. And then she knew. She had never seen a cyclone. She would now. She would be killed by one in a moment. Her beautiful, beautiful life—that was just beginning!

What was that Willie said was the best thing to do if a cyclone should come?

"Go out and lay flat, girl, if ever you see one of the things within a hundred miles, out where there isn't a tree or a house or anything."

She ran to the gate, wrenched it open, and plunged across a great, bare alfalfa field. She ran to the middle of it, then, when the roaring grew nearer and she felt a puff of hot wind in her face she threw herself down and desperately twined her fingers among the alfalfa fronds. She pressed her body against the earth, shut her eyes. But she could not shut from her ears that roaring, nor expel from her mind that vision she had caught of hideous, trailing, brown clouds.

"You awful thing! You dirty thing! O-o-oh," she moaned.

She writhed under the hideousness of this unclean malevolent, capricious power, dealing death and destruction to delicate growing things, to trees, to trustful animals, sometimes tearing the homes of patiently struggling men board from board, doing silly, teasing things like driving a feather deep into the trunk of an oak tree. The roaring filled her ears, she felt her skirts clutched by a wind, she dug her fingers in among the strong roots of the plants in her hands. She heard then the noise of things hurtling through the air. Boards and bricks banged. She did not dare to look. Screams unearthly; whistlings horrible; always the roaring. She lay a moment; an eternity—then suddenly the rain came, rain that blew and poured and beat, hail that powdered the things the cloud hands had left.

A soft, gentle, cool wind at last. She lifted her head, opened her eyes. Her head ached and her back. She was bruised all over by the hail stones. And then she forgot herself, forgot her bruises, the shivering of her drenched, stiffened limbs under her wet clothes. The house. The house, thank God, still stood. Her home, and Willie's, was not gone. But the barn was gone, a scattered mass of debris. She saw three feebly waving hoofs sticking up from a pile of split boards. She got up and ran. The fence was down. Some of the chickens, unhurt, alive, were scratching boredly among wheat and corn scattered by the storm.

The sun began presently to shine gently, sweetly. Willie! Where was Willie? She wanted to scream his name and run and run till she found him and hold him and never let him go. Poor Willie. Of course, there would be the tornado insurance, but all that work—why, it would take them both, working all summer, to fix things up again. Their farm was terribly hurt. But not ruined. Oh, not ruined.

And then she caught sight of a strong figure in faded shirt and overalls running up the lane. She ran to meet it. There, by piles of boards out of which the three hoofs stuck, they met, two sobbing, gasping forms.

"But, Willie, the house was not hurt. Just to think. Our home—we have it. We have it still."

And then they began it—that long working. Willie had to shoot Jenny, poor Jenny who had leaned trustingly against the barn with her little wobbly-legged colt. They got a place for the few live chickens to sleep. The cows, uninjured, they drove up from the pasture and milked and protected from the coming night as well as they could. And never could Willie bear Lucille out of his sight. And never could she be one moment away from him.

At last, at sunset, they sank down on the edge of the little porch, too weary to move, too stricken to think of food. Willie sat, looking out straight in front of him.

"Why," he pointed, "look what it did to your yellow rosebush. Pulled it up, right up, out of the ground like as if a big hand had done it. It's torn all to pieces. You'd think the old cyclone had it in for that bush. We'll have to get you another this fall."

"No! No! No! I never want to see one again."

She looked down at her dress, torn, streaked, ruined. And then she turned and looked at the house, at the table in the kitchen with its fluttering white cloth, at the gleaming pans. Through the window she could see the white spread and the dainty scarfs of the bedroom. The little porch was washed clean by the rain, the porch she had not had time to scrub. She crept closer and slipped her hand through Willie's arm and leaned against him. His big, strong, thick, farmer hand closed on hers. She felt warm and safe. So safe.

"It was so terrible," she trembled, "so—so—such a big dirty thing, Willie."

"Yes, I know. But you want to forget it right away. We're never likely to have another one. Yes, it does seem like a wicked thing. Of course, the same forces cause the rain and the wind we got to have for the crops—but it seems lawless. We got to have laws, I guess, and they have to be kept." And then he turned and his face worked and he whispered: "Beautiful, beautiful girl, you're safe."

And she hid her face against his clean, damp breast as she had hidden it against the safe earth when the storm raged.

Practical Joke That Recoiled on Player

Mme. Dostoievsky tells of a practical joke which she played upon her husband, and which almost led to tragic results. Seeing an anonymous letter in a serial novel—a letter warning a husband that his wife was faithless—she conceived the idea of copying it in disguised handwriting and mailing it to her husband.

The story of what happened to her when Dostoievsky returned home, half-crazed with jealous anger and suffering, is thrill enough for fiction. One thing that he did was to seize a locket, which hung by a chain around her neck, and tear it off, causing the chain to cut her neck till it bled.

Fortunately, the locket contained Dostoievsky's own portrait; otherwise, as he confessed in the moments of unutterable relief that followed, he might have killed the woman whom he loved so passionately.—International Book Review.

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

By Reading Experiences of Other Women

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 206, Oxford, N. Y., writes—"If it had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as it should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in different papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband got me one bottle at first; then I took two others. Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Tanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than half a century, this reliable medicine has been used by women with very satisfactory results. If the Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

California Rich in Semi-Precious Gems

Purple amethysts come from Mono, and San Diego offers a royal rose quartz. Fleches d'Amour (Love's Arrows) with their tiny red shafts inclosed in pellucid crystals are found in California; and the strange rich-brown wood-tint crystals from Elsinore are unique. From south of us comes the deep-green epidote of gem quality fully as valuable as that from the Ural mountains. Tulare produces exquisite chrysoprase (prase-opal) of the finest kind, and it may again come into the great popularity it once enjoyed, especially among the most ancient races of Asia, who deeply admired its tender light green and soft translucence. Some Tulare stones are really a semi-opal, with a pleasing greenish mysterious allure all their own.—Los Angeles Times.

Learns Indian Lore

James Willard Schultz, author of many notable Indian tales, and scion of an aristocratic Eastern family, is among the few living white men who were adopted by Indians and spent almost an entire lifetime among the red men.

When a young man Schultz went to live with the Blackfeet and he married a woman of that nation. He lives in Glacier National park, where he has done much of his writing in the immediate environment of the Blackfeet tribe. He today is engaged in restoring the original Indian names to the mountains, lakes and streams of Glacier National park, with the approval of the United States government.

IN THE LEAD

Fisher's engineering experts—skilled beyond their calling by virtue of years of continuous research and experimentation with all types of body construction—unhesitatingly aver that none but Body by Fisher—exclusively used by General Motors for Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars—affords the essential virtues of safety, beauty and comfort which characterize every Fisher product. Quite logically the public knows that when any improvement which really gives an enhanced measure of safety, comfort and luxury is perfected, Fisher will be the first to present it just as Fisher has created and been the first to present every important improvement in body design and construction of the past decade.

It Can't Be Done

No mechanical device ever invented could start at its maximum speed—no human being could ever do it.

It takes a man several years, after he leaves school, to reach the point of speedy progress towards success—yet how often do we see young men—just starting—yet trying to travel the pace of men who started twenty years before they did. It can't be done—living and spending beyond our real capacity is the surest road to failure known.

If you would travel the road to success, you should have reserve power in the form of a savings account in the Southern Trust and Commerce Bank.

The same foresight and careful planning are required to operate the great systems of the power companies cheaply to meet the electrical needs of a thousand uses and be ready to serve at the turn of a switch.

California power men have long furnished that kind of service as shown by these
